ABSTRACT

A processor embedded in a device includes instructions for procedures to be completed by a user. A display provides the instructions as steps for completion to the user. The processor monitors status of the device to determine completion of the steps before proceeding with the 5   next step. Errors in performing steps are identified by the processor and steps to correct the errors are displayed for execution by the user.